Chairman's Budget News

In June the Legislature passed a state budget that doesn't raise taxes, puts more money into education, and sets money aside in the state's Rainy-Day Fund to prevent the calls for future tax increases. This on-time budget keeps our promise to Pennsylvanians by being respectful of the tax dollars they entrust to us. The budget spends $33.997 billion and only grows by 1.8% as compared to the 2018-19 fiscal year. There are no new taxes or fees in this budget.

One of the most important aspects of this budget was the historic deposit in the state's Rainy-Day Fund. The Rainy-Day Fund is essentially the state's savings account. The goal of this fund is to save money in good economic times so that during a recession a state can weather the downturn in revenue collections. Nearly every state in the nation has something similar to the Rainy-Day Fund; however Pennsylvania's commitment to saving money has been lagging as compared to other states. This year's budget transferred $317 million to the Rainy-Day Fund which is one of the largest transfers in the history of Pennsylvania.

The size of the Rainy-Day Fund and a state's commitment to funding it are one of the top things our credit agencies look at. Having greater reserves will result in a higher credit rating which saves the state in borrowing and interest costs. The large transfer to the Rainy-Day Fund helped lead to Fitch Ratings moving our credit outlook from negative to stable. The new outlook, according to Fitch, "reflects the Commonwealth's timely enactment of a fiscal 2020 budget that makes continued strides towards structural balance, while also making a notable deposit to its Rainy-Day Fund."

As we look to the future, we must make increasing the amount in the Rainy-Day Fund a priority. The economy is cyclical and at some point in the future we will face a recession. It is important that we plan accordingly and are adequately capitalized to meet the budgetary challenges a down economy creates.
